• DVI Program
• IPV Education & Training
• Youth Programs for Future Leaders

“At the beginning, I was really scared... But when I was able to come to shelter, I felt safe. There were a lot of people who care, who care for me in my new environment. It’s the best time in my life. At the shelter, no one cared about me or worked on me. Just that I am at rest of people.”

- Trac, Survivor of Domestic Violence

FROM AROUND AACI

As a student in AACI’s Leaders for Education, Advocacy, and Dialogue (LEAD) Program, Melissa wanted to get the most out of the experience and use the tools she needed to mobilize her community to vote. She support financed young leaders like Melissa and empowers them to make a difference in their communities!

LEAD teaches young people how to be community leaders through workshops, a network internship, and a community action plan. Melissa’s internship included a civic leadership workshop at San Jose city councilman’s office, and she began to ask why many APIs were not voting.

Today, Melissa is studying political science and computer science at Stanford University. She continues to be a leader for change and is inspired by using technology to people understand the issues and make change. She has developed an app that helps users to understand the issues that impact them, and more must be done to empower them with a voice.”
